

Lofty Dump Minipack 2 Submissions (Round 5)

(Mostly trying to remember from the stream so sorry if not super specific Ed.)

Headpats and Praise (Kayze): Accepted

I liked this file a lot. Harkens back to a very specific style of vocal dumping that I really haven't seen since like the early lofty packs – possibly minty 1. I also think the song lends itself well to this kind of approach. Happy to have it in the pack if not only for posterity! Fun file, too. As we discussed, there are a few spiky sections, but they come in spots that make sense to me so we good.

I JUST WANT A ROLLIE (Samctuary): Denied 1234121/10

Can you please just chart this for real!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Kyuusei Argyros (Tim): Accepted

I needed a few more 30s in the pack. This is mostly a pretty straight forward speed file, but you break it up with some interesting moments of space (and some cool, simplistic patterning) as well as just having nice colors in the streams. Everything plays well, so I'm sure people will uprate the hell out of this to show all their friends how fast fingers can go at the public school talent show. The song is tolerable.

How many characters does it take to screw in a lightbulb?

Well, for one, this has already been released, you gigantic nerd!!!!!!!!!! Don't you dare try to give me your scrapzzzz. Also song choice is meh, and tbh its a cool file without the holds but the holds really take away from what you have here imo. If this wasn't already a released file, I might have considered it without the holds, but meh. Also, I'm at a point where I need to start being a little more selective with song choice, given what's in the pack so far, and I wasn't a huge fan of it.

Xaleidoscopix (mikatheidiot): Denied

This file is actually incredible, it just doesn't fit this pack's aesthetics. You should really try to find a technical dump pack that specializes in BPM fuckery for this one. I've viewed this in the editor just for fun multiple times since you submitted it. Every time I look at it I basically play the file until the end, it is entertaining as all hell. Super good job on this – don't even want to know how much time went into it. Also, the patterns are mostly spectacular. If it wasn't for the BPM stuff, I probably would've accepted this as one of the boss files for the pack, but I feel like it would be a huge disservice if I asked you to remove all of the stuff that makes this file so special. Sorry, mang :(

The Wonder of U (jeyfor): Conditional

I feel like this is a pretty filler file. Kinda made me sad because I actually LOVE the song choice. Doo-wop and early rock and roll are seriously understepped genres. I've been interested in doing more ever since lofty dump 1, but sadly always forget to come up with something for one of those two genres. This is a conditional basically for song choice alone. I think it's a really safe dump file with pretty normie patterning. Kind of a shame. I feel like you could've put those patterns down for just about any song and they would vaguely fit. People would probably play it, though, so I'll consider it as a filler when we get closer to release.

Chit Moe (Frothy Lion): Accepted

If I didn't see someone else's cdtitle for this file I would have sworn like 2017 me charted it. Very cool to see a lofty mimic file that goes back that far in my approach to patterning things. This is a very fun play, and I need more of this kind of song choice fr fr. Don't have any problems with this one. Cool submission.

Clumsy Thoughts (Oxygen): Denied

There were some good moments in this file, but, honestly, most of it felt a little bland to me. It was kinda fun to score on, but it wasn't interesting enough for me to want to accept it. Also, the song choice thing applies here as well. The less I think the song choice applies to a lofty pack, the more interesting the patterning and approach taken has to be for me to want it. I've accepted more Japanese/Asian music than people want already, so, I basically have to pass on this.
