

SL: name, Your desk getting surfed?

Let's get right into it

The dog that you love very much is being mischievous towards your kitchen counter

Even if there isn't anything on there, he feels the need to check it.

You have tried everything

Making the floor more fun

Giving him all sorts of toys

Scolding him.

Still, nothing seems to work

The only thing that keeps him off the counter is your voice

But that works for only a few minutes at best

Then he is back at it, again.

No need to worry

Because there's a trick that will fix this problem

Everyone who has tried it has seen massive changes in their dog's behavior

For the better of course

Now the explanation would be too long if I had put it into this email

Everyone would be discouraged if they would see an email that long

Instead

I have prepared a video for you where I explain this method

Subject Line: Struggle with Countertop-Surfer?

Let's dive right in,

Your beloved pup is up to some mischief when it comes to your kitchen counter.

Even when there's nothing up there, it's like a magnet for him.

You've tried everything

bribing him with treats, making the floor more enticing, and introducing all sorts of toys.

But so far, none of them showed any results.

The only thing that keeps your dog at bay is the sound of your voice, but that's a temporary solution at best.

Everyone who's tried it has seen remarkable improvements in their dog's behavior.

Now, I could explain this method in an email, but it might get a bit lengthy, and I don't want to overwhelm you.

Instead,

I've put together a video where I walk you through this straightforward solution.

Best regards,

[Your Name]

P.S. This method works wonders; you'll be amazed at the results!

SL: cat not being tolerated by the dog ?!

It is an awful feeling I know

You see I decided to rescue a dog named Jersey

She was supposed to be an angel around other animals

But when we brought her home she started growling at our cat and he was hissing back.

From there never-ending conflict began

She would always chase him off if he came near us

He couldn't eat anywhere near her

The worst thing I saw was picking him up by the neck and dragging him.

That's when my worry peaked.

I had to ask myself some serious questions

"Can the cat even live like this?"

"What is this leading into ?"

I don't want to hear hissing and growling anymore

The temporary solution I came to was "leave it" but only worked as long as she saw me.

I don't want to isolate my cat from me because my dog can't control himself.

The cat was here first and that's not fair to him,

But

I don't want to rehome my dog whom I've put so much time, love, and work into.

Then, I came across this method that turned everything around

The behavior was fixed within a few days

They can now eat near each other

No hissing, growling, and chasing into the sunset.

Now I want to share it with you because you deserve it as much as I do
