- The holidays are cut way too short for the much needed breaks!
- Teachers and students start in august. All Fridays off for students so there is no confusion (consistency). Length of school day is more manageable and enables students to get to work by 5:00.
- This one is close to perfect. If we added in a few more days at the end of the year in favor of keeping the week at thanksgiving.
- The only concern about this version is the end time which is just too late for kids, similar concern to A.
- Consistent, fair, but not perfect. I strongly feel we still need a week at Thanksgiving and two weeks at Christmas, even if it pushes us into the first week of June.
- The only reason many people have told me they don't like this calendar is simply because of the 2-days at Thanksgiving. Other than that, this is not a bad calendar.
- Overall, the fairest representation from all facets and meets the purpose of the mission.
- Regarding students- Not the longest day, they sacrifice, yes, with an increase in their day. So there is a give from length of day.
- Staff perspective- I think this calendar represents the purest version of our mission is recruiting and maintaining quality teachers. The teachers sacrifice in loosing some length in their "traditional holiday breaks", but have off most all Fridays in exchange. I think this is fair trade off, from all points of view, in my opinion. Every facet is giving a little to make this work and be beneficial to the purpose.

- Not my favorite because of the length of the day but I feel like would be most for community. Adjustments I would recommend: Teachers start on July 31 and work August 4. Students start on the 8th and have off the entire week of Thanksgiving.
- In November would like a full week for Thanksgiving by placing those 2 days in August on 11, 18th.
- Add more days through the end of May to get the entire week of Thanksgiving off.
- Move Nov 20, 21 to the beginning of the year . Move Jan 2nd, third to after Memorial Day
- I'd be ok with reducing thanksgiving break, it's really close to Christmas break so a whole week isn't necessary. Day length getting long though
- This makes the most sense, does not start any earlier in the year than needed, length of day is suitable and sustainable. Sticks to the strict 4 day instructional week while allowing for any buffer room.
- End times might be long for PK-5.
- I like the PLC Days for teachers.
- Might be better a schedule for Parents
- I'm split between calendar B & D!!!!
- Do not like that Thanksgiving and Christmas are shortened... School times are good and see the most consistency in the calendar with the Friday work days either being the 1st or 2nd week of the month.
- If I was someone applying for a job here and I saw this calendar I would love it! It still gives us time with our families for Christmas and Thanksgiving. It doesn't have any Fridays. I know it's a longer day but I'm here before and stay after those times anyway.
- This schedule provides the least benefits; no built-in bad-weather days, very late dismissal schedule which means kids will be home from school even later plus holiday schedules are much shorter.
