

Getting Started with SAA Citation Style¹

What is SAA Style?

The Society for American Archaeology (SAA) citation style is the preferred citation style for the three academic journals published by the SAA. These journals include American Antiquity, Latin American Antiquity, and Advance in Archaeological Practice.

This SAA citation style guide focuses on common citation forms and refers to the Guide (Editorial Policy, Information for Authors, and Style Guide for American Antiquity, Latin American Antiquity, and Advance in Archaeological Practice, June 2017). All cited sections and page numbers in this document are in reference to the Guide.

General Rules

- Formatting: Double-space all lines of text, including the references cited list. Accepted fonts include 12-point size Times New Roman and Arial. Confirm formatting requirements with your instructor.
- Headings (Section 3.3.1 in Guide, pg. 13): Primary heads should be centered, in bold, with headline-style capitalization (principal words capitalized excluding articles, prepositions, and conjunctions), and two lines of space above and below.
- Secondary heads should be typed flush left and set in italics, using headline-style capitalization, with a single line of space above and below.
- Tertiary heads should be typed as part of the paragraph, with a paragraph indentation, the head italicized, with headline-style capitalization, followed by a period, and followed by the beginning of the text of the paragraph.
Example: Pithouse Villages. The survey uncovered 13 pithouse village sites, all located along the Rio Grande . . .
- References Cited and Notes are primary-level headings.
- Title page (Section 3.2.1 in Guide, pg. 12): Centre the title at the top of the first page with all capital letters and a bold typeface. Author names are to be centered and placed halfway down the page, with proper capitalization for names, along with academic affiliations and email addresses.
- Italics (Section 3.3.8 in Guide, pg. 18): Words in languages other than the primary language in which the manuscript is written are italicized consistently throughout the manuscript.
- Titles of books, journals, and other literary works are italicized when mentioned in the text; article titles mentioned in the text are in roman type, set off by quotation marks, as are the titles of theses and dissertations.
- Parentheses (Section 3.3.14 in Guide, pg. 20): Back-to-back sets of parentheses should not be used. Instead, combine elements using a semicolon within a single set of parentheses. Thus "(e.g., the Castillo) (Figure 1)(Tozzer 1957)" should appear as "(e.g., the Castillo; Figure 1; Tozzer 1957). Place elements in order of importance to the sentence before the parentheses with citations last.

- Quotations (Section 3.3.6 in Guide, pg. 16): Quoted matter of less than four typed lines in length should be run into the text between quotation marks. The in-text citation should be placed in parentheses.
- Quoted matter that runs to four or more typed lines should be set off from the text as a block quote and double-spaced, with two lines of space above and below. The in-text citation should be placed in square brackets and not parentheses.

Citations in Text (Section 3.4 in Guide, pg. 21, and subsequent sub-sections)

- All in-text citations need three elements: Author last name and year of publication from the original source in which the referenced information can be found. All direct quotations must have a page number from where the quotation was taken.
- Page numbers should be used where applicable for both direct quotes and paraphrases of external works.
- Author last name and year of publication are separated by a single space, and the year of publication and the page numbers are separated by a colon.
- Various examples of different in-text citations can be found below:

- Simple citation:

(Wylie 1991:28) or Wylie (1991:28)

Note: For authors with two surnames, as is usually the case in Spanish-speaking countries, use both surnames in the citation.

- Citing a work with two authors:

(Lipe and Varien 1999:137-138) or Lipe and Varien (1999:137-138)

- Citing a work with three or more authors:

(Cobean et al. 1991:43) or Cobean and others (1991:43)

Note: Use of "et al." is limited to in-text citations. The only time all names should be listed for a paper with three or more authors in a text citation is when a person is senior author of more than one jointly authored item in the same year.

Example: Barnosky, Anderson, and Bartlein (1987) and Barnosky, Grimm, and Wright (1987) would appear as shown, not as Barnosky et al. (1987a, 1987b). Whereas the use of et al. is permissible in in-text citations, in the References Cited section all names must be listed following the senior author's name.

- Two or more references by same author from different years:

(Fox 1986:26, 1991:46)

- Two or more references by same author in same year:

(Jones 1972a:44, 1972b:23-25)

- Several works with different authors cited in one place:
(Ashmore 1986:29; Coe 1965:52-55; de Montmollin 1988:138; Friedl et al. 1990:21-25; Schele 1986:23)
- Government agency, company, or similar entity as author:
(United States Department of Agriculture, Soil Conservation Service [USDA, SCS] 1975)

Note: State the complete name of the agency, company, etc., as with any other citation, but if the citation will occur more than once in the text, then abbreviate names to their commonly accepted acronyms and place in brackets. Subsequent citations in the text will be, e.g., (USDA,SCS 1975) or USDA, SCS (1975).

- No author specified:
Cite the group or agency issuing the report or the publisher.
(United Nations 1963:7), (Committee on Ethics 1977:3)
- Newspapers:
(The Vancouver Sun [TVS], 10 September 1990:[page numbers, if available])
Note: After first mention, simply use TVS with date and page numbers.
- Web pages and electronic documents:
 - Treat web pages, electronic documents, and open data as published data, but cite the document accordingly as a single- or multiple-authored document or as one produced by a group or agency (no author specified). For example: (Glascock 2001; Shackley 2001) or Glascock (2001), Shackley (2001)
 - For a group citation use: (Northwest Research Obsidian Studies Laboratory 2001) or Northwest Research Obsidian Laboratories (2001)
 - If no author or date can be determined, use name of the website as the author, and the year in which you looked at the page for the date.

References Cited List (Section 3.11 in Guide, pg. 31)

- The reference section begins a new page, under the primary heading References Cited, and must be double- spaced throughout. The examples that follow are single-spaced to conserve paper.
- All references cited in the text must appear in the References Cited section list (except for personal communications and primary-source materials), and all entries in the list must be cited in the text.
- Arrange the parts of each reference in the general order: author(s), date, title (and subtitle if applicable), publisher, location of publisher.
- Alphabetize the references cited section by the last names of authors.
- List authors on their own line, starting with primary author's last name followed by first name. Additional authors should be listed by their first names followed by their last names and should be arranged alphabetically by last name and separated by commas.

- Multiple references from the same author(s) should be grouped together, with the name of the author or group of authors appearing only once in the References Cited list.
- The first line of the reference, listing the author(s) should be completely aligned to the left, the second line starting with the date should be indented 4 spaces (or 0.19 inches). The date is separated from the title of the item by an additional 4 spaces (or 0.19 inches). The third and all subsequent lines should be indented 8 spaces (or 0.31 inches).
- For specific examples, see the following table:
