

I started a friendship with GTDBastion around two weeks ago, just the other day it got cut off after I gave clear expectations for our relationship and he lied to my face and invalidated my feelings and at least the last part you'll come to find is a theme by the end of this document.

Two or so weeks ago I started to get back into Twitch, watching it and streaming myself. I came across Bastion in another furies chat one night and he seemed nice and was talking about streaming himself. I dropped a follow, he followed back. I ended up in his stream one night and spent the night playing DBD on stream. Afterwards we connected on discord and things got a little flirty.

After a few days of things getting more and more flirty late at night, he finally decides to ask if I'm open in my relationship and if I'd like to do more sexual things with him.

For more context to this, over the days of flirting and conversations I made it clear that I was asexual, didn't like sending porn or other sexual stuff and preferred text as I was a good writer and did role play quite a bit back in the day. Bastion seemingly agreed with my way of thinking, not enjoying porn being sent, and I also assumed the text thing too since I did make it clear that I was a good writer.

One other thing for context, I did lie about my body type in this relationship. I assumed it would be a text based thing between two furies so what does it matter if I'm actually fat and not an otter? Maybe not the best thing in retrospect but I did admit to it quite literally the next day after being hounded for nudes.

So we start this "soft domination" type relationship and Bastion is telling me what he likes. Everything he's into seems fine and instead of nudes he wants audio of me moaning while I jerk off and doing various dirty talk things to him. I make it clear that I'm down with audio but any nudes are off limits as I'm uncomfortable with my body, have low self esteem and also have self harm scars (all true, the only lie was that I was skinny).

Within 30 minutes or so of us doing this and me sending videos he's already asking for me to send him videos of me stroking under blankets, revealing my curling toes and wanting to see me jerking precum out of my dick. Due to the constant asks and me feeling like he would be disappointed if I didn't, I took a single close up photo of a bead of pre on my dick. Still making it clear that more was unacceptable and uncomfortable to me.

The rest of the "session" wasn't great. He didn't do much to actually keep my mood going other than relying solely on me getting off to him wanting to get me off while I did all of the hard and dirty work making moaning videos and creatively filming myself in ways that didn't show off my body (both to hide scars and my lie about my body type).

By the end he finally tells me to finish and I have to take audio of me finishing, I just couldn't do it for real, he didn't do enough for me and didn't make it seem like I had a place to voice that concern as this seemed mostly about his fetish and him being dominant and getting what he wants.

After I “finish” he tells me “Oh actually I don't even need to finish myself to be satisfied, just getting you off was enough for me” and I'm like oh interesting but alright. He then stops messaging me for twenty minutes and sends me a picture of some sex toy with a load inside of it.

So you didn't need to finish to be satisfied, but you stopped talking to me and went and finished anyways... I'm not sure what to believe really and this was supposed to be a relationship based on trust (Bastion made it very clear that he needed trust) but he wasn't being very trustworthy with me.

By our second session he kept pushing for nudes even though I had already made my opinion and uncomfortableness with them clear. This is when I admit to him my lie about my body type. He seems fine with it and after more asks for nudes I figure “ok this guy really wants this and even though I'm not perfectly comfortable with it and he keeps pushing I'll go along with it so that I can keep this friendship going as I don't have many friends and sometimes you have to do things you don't like for friends”

So that session has me sending nudes for a while and I start to have a panic/anxiety attack and can no longer keep a boner and can't even think about finishing. I try to let Bastion know this and that I would be more than happy to switch over to just text based stuff for now since I also can't send moaning audio because the neighbors are awake. And he hits me with the “well I guess we could but I won't really enjoy it and won't be able to finish” and I'm REALLY uncomfortable after that so I ask that we end the session early and think about another time.

Days go by and Bastion is asking me for “tribute content” which I guess are pics and videos between sessions and at this point I realize this has gone too far and I'd like it to stop. I let Bastion know that due to my current antidepressant usage that I would need to end this aspect of our relationship as I felt I couldn't be that sexual in this sexual relationship. That reason was true, but was only the partial truth. And I didn't want to reveal the full truth as I wanted to keep this friendship going cause like I said I don't have many friends and this was the first person to seemingly show genuine interest in me in a while.

That's it for the sexual stuff. I know I consented and sent the nudes myself but I was hounded, I was coerced and I did things I wouldn't have done of my own volition if I hadn't been influenced into doing it. I wasn't fully honest about my feelings every step of the way but again I didn't want to ruin what I hoped to be a great close relationship.

During the day time Bastion and I talked over Discord, not exactly super in-depth conversations and he seemed to be distracted a lot of the time and very slow to respond which is fine if someone wants to do that but it became clear to me that the lack of response wasn't always due to real life getting in the way but him deciding to focus on other people.

I started streaming more and more after networking with a ton of people and got a tiny bit of viewership on twitch while all of this was going on. The thing is though, even though Bastion was supposedly a close friend of mine that enjoyed my company and wanted to help me succeed in streaming, he never showed up to my streams barring one time very early on before we fully knew each other. And he was clearly in multiple streams at that time and wasn't fully focused on me. Again that is fine if that's the expectation for the relationship and at the time it was, but after two weeks of me being in his stream for hours on end, gifting him subscriptions on twitch and participating in his discord (more than just talking, I made suggestions for improving the stream, the discord, gave helpful links for DBD players and participated in other chats to make the place feel alive) I never saw him be active in my stream again.

At the same time while he wasn't ever active in my streams and would take ages to respond to me and leave me on read, I realized he was very active in another streamers twitch channel.

Now I don't have beef with this other person. In fact I followed him and watched him a ton because I wanted to be friends with him too in this whole big group of streamers.

Every single time this streamer was live and playing dead by daylight, Bastion was in the chat, actively chatting the entire time, he joined the game as well and played with this streamer for hours. This happened multiple times and I watched it, lurking in the chat as I felt awkward to butt into the pretty constant flirting Bastion was doing to this streamer in chat.

Seeing this made me jealous, not necessarily of the flirting as Bastion did that to me as well and at that point I was still not feeling good over the whole "coerced into sending nudes" thing, so that wasn't a big deal. I was really jealous that this other streamer was getting attention and support on their stream while I was left with nothing. I didn't have active chatters, I didn't have anyone join my discord even though I made it clear I had one, I had no community while propping up this other person's community and watching them do the same to other people while I got left behind.

This all comes to a head when one day Bastion asks me to jump into discord VC so he can drop some lore on his life and this modded video game he plays. He reveals to me that he runs a server for a modded old star wars game called Movie Battles 2. Apparently the server he runs was set up because the other North American server for the game was considered "too woke" so they made a server with less rules and more shitty people and it got more popular.

Throughout our relationship he's slowly revealed details of this modded game to me and how the community is full of terrible people that want to watch the world burn. He was terrified that people from that community would find out about him being a furry and harass him or his furry community. Trying to be a good friend I assuaged his fears and let him know I'd be there to mod his chat if anyone were to try and be hateful to him (again more work from me while he still wouldn't stop into my streams).

I didn't actually know he ran the server himself before this point, he said he had money in the community which caused him to stay but then of course I find out he runs this community of terrible people that would hate him if they knew the real him. During the call he even admitted that he can no longer play the modded game without hiding his name because people constantly harass him over banning a cheater that used abusive language on the regular.

Also during this call a furry member of the community joined into the call and proceeded to use the word "retard" out of the blue when referring to some furry community related drama which I feel like says a lot about the company that Bastion keeps in this modded game community.

The next day I decided to talk about this modded game with him again as I felt like it must be pretty important to him to play the game still while being harassed and hated on and knowing they'd hate the real him. He responded to me in a very blunt way about how he did not want to talk about that community anymore as something drama came up there. I felt hurt as I only inquired about this out of genuine interest and after he spent an hour telling me all about it the day before.

Due to this blunt response from him I decided to not respond all day and allow him to maybe realize what he did was wrong and apologize. When he did eventually respond to me after an entire day (and streaming with the other twitch streamer too) he apologized and I had to let out what was going on.

I let him know that I spent a lot of time, money and effort on his community, that he wasn't giving anything back to me and I could see that he was clearly able to give that kind of support to others because he was giving it to this other streamer constantly.

Excuses and lies started to be made. He said he wasn't just in this one person's chat, he was in a lot of people's chats! Just not my twitch chat at all which is all I wanted after the support I gave.

He just kept making excuses for not being there for me and then also tried to claim that he spent "so much time with me off stream" which three or so discord calls isn't a lot of time, and like I've stated before our text conversations on discord weren't always in depth and he would take ages to respond leaving me to choose between doing nothing waiting for him or delaying our conversation even further by missing out on replying because I was doing something.

The thing that really set me off was when he told me he "even helped me out with audio quirks" for my stream. That conversation consisted of me saying "damn my audio is really fucky on this laptop and I can't fix it. I'll probably have to reinstall windows" he says "Oh is there anything I can do to help" I say "Nope, I just have to reinstall windows I've tried everything else. That wasn't him helping me, that was a normal conversation between friends! But now it's being used as proof of him helping me with my stream.

He also talks about how he shouted me out in his discord and I had to tell him that that's cool of you but a shout-out to my twitch channel in your discord but it's almost 100% useless. I got zero followers from it and it just made him feel better at the end of the day. What I needed was someone to actively participate in my stream just like I did for him and he did for this other streamer.

After this conversation and him not taking accountability and making excuses and claiming all of these things that didn't help were actually helpful, I got really nervous and didn't want to mess up this friendship so I started to acquiesce. I started to say things were fine. That I was just jealous that I didn't mean to make him cry (because he said he stopped typing to cry at one point because he felt like he was messing up with everyone, but he did mess up with me and I let him know, I can't just hide it because it hurts his feelings...).

His responses to this were slow though and I was like "oh you're about to stream I get it" only to realize that he was setting up a very intimate co-stream with this other streamer who he kept saying he didn't have a bias for and I got no final reply.

I tune into the stream to see him playing dead by daylight with this other streamer, their PNGtubers literally right next to and on top of each other for the stream which is WAY closer and intimate than I've seen anyone else be on an "impromptu co-stream" (literally bastions words, but he told me this before I even knew about the co-stream, he was already making excuses for this stream before it happened).

This devastated me. I couldn't get someone who was seemingly my friend to ever visit my stream and support me or join my discord and he's sitting there costreaming with this other person, helping them set up their discord and telling me "oh I do this for everyone". I put so much time and effort into helping him out and I got nothing back, I had my feelings invalidated in multiple instances and I was lied to.

I told my fiance Talbot what had been going on and they told me to leave the discord (I already had actually) and to block Bastion on every platform. So I did. I was lied to and embarrassed and also a little jealous so of course I would cut off this "friendship".

The next day in an effort to appear normal I go to do my normal scheduled twitch stream and half way through I realize this other streamer (the one Bastion was very close with) was watching my stream. Now he had never been in my chat before this at all so as soon as I see this I realize what's going on. Bastion has either sent this other streamer to keep tabs on me or he wants to keep tabs on me myself because of whatever Bastion told him about me.

I decide against better judgement and Talbot's judgement to unblock Bastion and telegram and ask him to not have his streamer friend in my stream to keep tabs on me and it makes me uncomfortable. This was our last conversation. He invalidated my feelings and acted like I was asking for too much attention and priority of his time when none of that was true. I only asked for a fraction of the time and effort I put into him, his stream and his community and never even asked for money. And after not getting any support, being lied to and being embarrassed I don't think Bastion is a good person and he used me.

He blocked me then and that's where this ends.

I don't want to cancel the guy. I don't want to make his life miserable. I don't want any hate directed at him and I don't want him ostracized from his or any community. I just want the truth out there so that people know my side of the story and don't ostracize me from this little twitch community I've become part of.