

Communications & Storytelling Internship

Forming Leaders. Serving Nashville.

The Vision

Most internships ask students to support an organization's work. This one does something different.

At Leadership Cooperative, we believe the city's future depends on leaders who are spiritually grounded, relationally skilled, and courageous enough to work across differences. This internship is designed to form those kinds of leaders - through real work, real relationships, and real proximity to Nashville's most important challenges and opportunities.

Interns won't just be helping us. They'll be growing into the kind of people Nashville needs.

Program Structure

Duration: One or two semesters (flexible based on student and school needs)

Compensation: Unpaid / Academic Credit

Faith Identity: Rooted in the way of Jesus

The Work: Nashville's transformation is being built through relationships, partnerships, and collaborative action across every sector of the city. Someone needs to tell that story! This intern will help Leadership Cooperative capture and communicate the movement unfolding across Nashville.

Responsibilities

- Write blog posts, social media content, and email newsletters in Leadership Cooperative's brand voice
- Interview partners, community members, and leaders to gather stories
- Help maintain a consistent content calendar
- Assist with event promotion and recaps
- Document impact and partnership moments visually and narratively

What You'll Learn

- How to translate mission into compelling narrative
- The discipline of writing with conviction and humility
- How storytelling builds movements, not just brands
- The relationship between communication and trust
- how rhythms of prayer, rest, and reflection aren't a retreat from the work but the very thing that makes sustained, hope-filled leadership possible.

Ideal Student Journalism, communications, English, marketing, or ministry major who wants their words to matter beyond a grade.