	Style: my students read up on the lesson assigned, so they have an in-depth understand the composition. I spend up to one hour with the student doing the critique and the student does the correction themselves. This enhances the learning experience. The student must take detailed notes on a spreadsheet that I give them that will include a photo. They also keep a booklet with the printed image of the lesson and all the notes about the style and what the corrections are so that next time they do that same composition they can refer back to their notes so they don't repeat the same mistakes.

*Are you willing to set up a time for a prospective student to meet with you via phone, Facetime, Zoom.
