Teen Races to Win

by Marcie Jones

1	Cassie Ganis is a teenage racecar driver. She's only 19 years old, but she already races professionally.		with her father's help. Later that year, she drove in her first race.
2	From a young age, Cassie loved to watch car racing. Her father raced cars as a hobby, and when she was young, he often took her to the track to cheer him on. When he saw that she was interested in the sport, he took her to watch races at the kids' track. Cassie was excited to see children drive their special cars at 60 kilometers an hour. Soon after, she decided that she wanted to become a racecar driver.	4	Cassie is now on a team that competes all over the United States of America. She is busy, but she still finds time to talk about safe driving at high schools, colleges and teenage clubs. Cassie explains how important road safety is and it doesn't matter if you drive on the racetrack or just drive home.
3	When Cassie was ten years old, she asked her father to allow her to race on the kids' tracks. He agreed, but he told Cassie that she had to learn how to drive safely. The first step was to learn the rules. Cassie learned the rules in just two weeks. Then she built her first car	5	Racecar driving is a challenging and dangerous sport. However, Cassie's biggest challenge is that most professional drivers are men. She has to work very hard to prove that she is good. But Cassie doesn't let that stop her from succeeding. Her goal is to be the best woman racecar driver
