Abstract

The abstract should reflect the whole content of the article. The abstract includes a brief introduction about the material object(s), research problem(s), theory(ies), method(s), and result(s). The article is written in English, in one paragraph, in 1 line spacing, and between 150 to a maximum of 500 words each.

Keywords: Keywords representing the important terms in the article are 5 words each after the abstract and are written in English. Each of the keywords must be separated with coma (,).

INTRODUCTION (12pt Cambria, 1.5 line spacing)

The introduction includes background, objectives, theory, methods, and literature review. The section ends with an emphasis on items to be discussed.

FINDING AND DISCUSSION (12pt Cambria, 1.5 line spacing)

The discussion is intended to interpret the findings in accordance with the theory applied and does not merely describe the findings. It should be enriched by referring to the related references. The discussion can be presented in sub-sections.

References in the body of the article use parentheses. Authors are suggested not to use too many direct quotations. The direct quotation and research data are written in a separate paragraph with double quotation marks ("..."), indented by half an inch from the margin, italicized, 1 line spacing, and 1 spacing enter, and without double quotation marks followed by the author's name, year, and page in parentheses (author's name, year: page), for example : (Sarwoto, 2018: 281).

In-text citation (enclosed in parentheses), which appear in the body articles, should contain the author's surname, the date, and the pages cited: (Nuraini, 2016) is used for works by one author; (Dzikrina & Munjid, 2018) is used for works by two authors; (Tami et al., 2017) is for works by three or more authors, only the surname of the first author is used, followed by 'et al'.

Personal communication, such as direct interview or mediated interview (telephone conversations, e-mail messages, and non-archived letters) are identified as “personal communication”: (J. Onyesoh, personal communication, August 22, 2018).

Newspaper and popular magazine articles may be in the text only, without a corresponding reference entry as long as the periodical title, date, article title (and page number (s) in the case of magazine articles) are provided: Nasionalisme merupakan ... (Salam, 2013).

Online sources require an access date if no publication date is provided. Figures, graphics, and tables can be included in the body articles with requirements as followed:

- The figure(s) is not blurred if it is zoomed for the size of the magazine or fits with the A4 paper with maximum size 5mb.
- Figure(s) and graphic(s) background by the color white.
- All figure(s), graphic(s), and table(s) must be numbered and captioned. An example of a caption is as follow:

CONCLUSION (12pt Cambria, 1.5 line spacing)

Conclusion is not just data repetition but presents the essence of interpretation. It can be a statement about expectations as stated in the introduction, ultimately based on the findings and discussions.

REFERENCES (12pt Cambria, 1 line spacing)

The reference section at the end of the articles provides full bibliographic information for all work cited in the text. Works that are not cited should not be included in this section. The Editor strongly recommends using Mendeley (APA 6th Style) for References and are arranged alphabetically by authors, then chronologically in ascending order. The editorial board strongly suggests that the references included in the text must contain at least 75% of articles published in the last 10 years and 25% of primary books and others which are relevant to a research.
