Warm-up Game-Bell Freeze // Kids English Theatre A quick warm- up movement game to help children practice sports, action verbs and target language Can you....? Yes, I can. It's based roughly on the traditional game of "musical statues" but without the music! It can be played in class, at home and even online I suggest giving action verbs that children may find fun to freeze

Snowy Owl Painting This fun owl painting can be done with sponges, crumpled paper towel, cotton ball, fabric, or cheesecloth, as show in the instructions.

Snowglobe printable These printable snow globes can be used to create a variety of different crafts. Students can create winter drawings inside the bubble or you can pair other printables (see the link below), stickers, rubber stamps, etc to fill the snowglobe. Try adding small white pom poms or the circle scraps from a hole puncher as "snow".

Winter Printables Here are some snow-people, snowflakes, mittens, and penguin printables! The smaller clip art can be used with the snowglobe (above) and the larger ones can be great for scissor and coloring practice.

Andy Goldsworthy When I think of a winter-time artist, I think of Andy Goldsworthy, who makes nature sculptures from materials, such as ice, snow, rocks, leaves, and twigs. Here are some links to lesson ideas connected to this artist and nature!
