General Aspects
Didn't Say Anything About That Be it during a fight or life in general, moral compass means little to Xzehir. If you don't want a person harmed, you had better specify. General terms mean nothing to him as Xzehir only deals in specifics. If the rules of a duel say you can't shoot before the count of three? A grenade over the shoulder is fair game, then. Tell him to stop someone at all costs, well, you better not be concerned if they're brought back dead or alive.		My Fees Are High For A Reason Xzehir does not charge a high price because he has to pay for a life of luxury; he charges a high price because he knows that he is the best in the game and worth the credits. Those who do not know him will feel he is gouging them, but those who have seen him in action know that he always delivers. This bravado follows Xzehir around and builds on the success of completed jobs and can be off-putting to other Mercenaries that will try and lash back by pointing out his failures.
Personality Aspects
Gentle Father At Heart Despite his line of work, Xzehir still sees himself as a refined gentleman and will often put on a show of being haughty and arrogant to those he does not know. He only lets the mask slip to show his more laid back nature to his daughter. To those he dislikes, he will actually become even more insufferable as taunts and quips without any regard for who or what he might be offending.		All Work No Play Xzehir considers his work to be the most important aspect of his life. This borderline obsessions with the "job" leaves little room for any kind of personal or social life, making it difficult for him to relax and enjoy spending time with others. he excels in activities that relate to their work, but the idea of work-life balance is an altogether abstract concept.
Combat Aspects
Shoot First, Ask Questions Later If Xzehir had been in Greedo's shoes, Han Solo would be pushing up daisies. He almost always acts on instinct, which typically means he can be seen as impulsive and may not think his actions through, especially in situations during or leading up to combat.		Keeping My Distance Xzehir vastly prefers ranged combat, taking every opportunity to use skills to disengage from melee and instead fight at range, so much so that he has become competent at staying out of melee in the first place.
