Hacked Ads - SCWAAMP

Critical consumers are critical readers. They read WITH the text (looking for the intended meaning/message), WITHIN the text (what other messages are there), and AROUND the text (making text-text, text-self, and text-world connections). Your job is to not only be a critical reader, but to also talk back and put the truth back in that might have been left out.

Once you find an ad that interests you, read WITH the text.

- What is the intended purpose? (What is the ad trying to convince you to do?)

Then, read WITHIN the text.

- What identities (think SCWAAMP) are being valued or glorified? How do you know?

- What truth was left out of the ad?

And read AROUND the text.

- List other text-text, text-self, text-world connections. What does this ad remind you of? What does it make you wonder?

Now imagine the ways that you can put the truth back in!

- What changes did you make to your advertisement? Why?

- What is the new message of your advertisement?
