Whenever Akbar had a problem, he called Birbal for help.        The Emperor had many rings of gold, pearls and diamonds, as he was very fond of jewellery. One of them had a large diamond at the centre and pearls around it. It was his favourite and he wore it daily.        At the palace, a staff of eight helped look after the Emperor's clothes and jewellery. They helped him get ready for court every day. No one else was allowed in his room.        While getting ready for court one day, Akbar wore all his jewellery as usual. But as he went to wear his favourite ring, it was not in its usual place. Akbar asked his staff to look for it but even they could not find it. It was missing.        He then thought if anyone could help find the ring, it was Birbal. When Birbal arrived in court, the Emperor told him about the theft and asked for his help.
