

How to get access to The New York Times through Buley Library:

1. Go to the Buley Library home page and select “Find a Database.”

The screenshot shows the Buley Library homepage. On the left, there is a 'Hours' section for Friday, January 24, 2025, listing various library services and their operating times. Below this are buttons for 'Chat is Offline', 'Reserve a Study Room', and 'Getting started'. The main content area features a 'Find a Database' dropdown menu that is open, displaying a list of databases including 'New York Times (site license)'. Other search options like 'Search for Journals', 'Find EBSCO Articles', 'Search Google Scholar', and 'Search Library Website' are also visible.

2. Open the dropdown menu and select “New York Times (site license).” The library should provide instructions from there.

This screenshot shows the same Buley Library homepage as the previous one, but with the 'New York Times (site license)' option selected in the 'Find a Database' dropdown menu. The dropdown menu is open, and the selected option is highlighted. The rest of the page, including the hours section and other search options, remains the same.
