

Notes

NOTE: When this doc is restricted, it just means that it's getting an update. Please avoid requesting access because the doc will be opened again afterwards. Thank you!

Click "CRT Television Guide" in the outline to start reading or scroll down if you're on mobile.

The writing style for CRT might not be accessible to all people.
Translations can be provided; just ask me.

CRT Television Guide

Disclaimer

Dear Electronic Enthusiast, Thank You for Taking Interest in Our Product! Please note that despite this television being tied to Get a Snack at 4 AM: SNACKCORE, CRT is a completely independent personal portrayal with a mix of canon and non-canon game elements. This guide was manufactured to inform you about our product's presence. With Appreciation, INFINESSANCE.

P.S. I think I must clarify that most of the information here is either made up, based on speculation and/or schemata. I am not very tech-savvy outside of radios and such, so I'm also learning as I write. Do not expect all information written on this guide to be accurate. ^入^

About

The CRT TV is a decorative object sitting on the table of the party room in the New Game Plus.

PRODUCT NAME: CRT "TELE" Television

MODEL CREATED ON: June 12, 2019

IMPERSONAL NOUNS: Anything at All

FLUIDITY: Apathetic

CAPACITANCE: Unlabeled

TELE, commonly referred to as CRT or simply just TV, is a sentient device that allows people to view footage of their worlds, primarily displaying footage of a particular snack game encore.

Appearance

CRT appears to be a black 20" Telefunken flat-screen CRT TV without a built-in DVD player. It sometimes has a party hat resting on top of it or a blue and yellow bow tie in front.

Personality

TELE is a rather stoic and standoff-ish device, often avoiding conversation with others without prompt. They do not show interest in friendly conversation and small talk with most individuals as it tends to absorb itself in its job and simply keep to itself.

Though, when interacted with, they are shown to be a jovial, humble and friendly character.

Overview

The purpose that they've set out to accomplish is to assist Party Person in their endeavors, offering all of their knowledge about the world and CCTV footage that they've collected from the past. They do not do much outside of their job despite being a sentient object, spending their days in the party room as they monitor the world around them through the cameras.

History

The original plan for them was that they were simply nothing more than a back-up for a fellow CRT TV that resides in the Void. However, that plan was changed as the ownership was switched over to Party Person after they asked if they had any devices that they can use for their parties. Since then, TELE has been residing with Party Person in their respective room since June 6, 2022.

Trivia

- CRT primarily remixes pre-existing media from the CCTV footage that they've collected over the years to create coherent sentences. CRT in Roleplay Talks Like This in order to embody that somehow through text. They also might occasionally [Talk like this] in order to show that they are repeating the person's words.
 - They do not have a set voice claim as they take apart various media to form sentences. However, if they ever had a voice, they would most likely speak like Jason "jtop" Topolski's PAMA from Minecraft: Story Mode and Niki Yang's BMO from Adventure Time.
 - If they were ever given dialogue in-game, they would sound like Felicity from Animal Crossing.
 - TELE has also mastered the art of displaying footage at its will so it usually accompanies the voice with a visual of what they are feeling. A good example of this is when they are feeling happy, they will display a close-up video of a flower blooming.
 - They can be requested to (or manually) change what they are displaying on their monitor by connecting it to a DVD or VHS player through its coaxial connector in the back.
 - If CRT was an insect, they would be a leafcutter ant.
-

INFINITEINCESSANCE.COM

Copyright © 2022 INFINCESSANCE
All rights reserved.