

Description of the Video, "These Students Take Down Slurs and Stereotypes"

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qMY16X3Zlww>

In the video from GLSEN, we see students talk about how slurs and stereotypes cover up who they are as individuals. The video shows faces of students and various sticky notes show the various slurs and stereotypes they are subjected to such as tranny, faggot, retard, loud etc. These sticky notes cover up the whole screen slowly as the faces of one student after another appear in the back. But finally, the students take the sticky notes down which allows them to share their truest selves. The students now stick their own sticky notes with terms such as bright, beautiful, her, amazing etc. Unlike the first time when the sticky notes filled the screen, this time only words that each student wants themselves to be described with appears.
