

Memunatu

About Memunatu

Memunatu is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization committed to promoting literacy, leadership, and empowerment. We create a unique, community-driven publication for under resourced girls (10-17 years old) across Africa and the African diaspora. Our focus is on content that can increase both girls' career potential and life skills. Distributed through schools with a teacher's guide, Memunatu is a platform for the next generation of women to change their circumstances and transform their communities.

Where we've been:

More about us: www.memunatumagazine.com

Program Internship

The goal of the Program Team to drive partnerships with schools to bring Memunatu Magazine to girls Across Africa and beyond.

Primary responsibilities:

- Researching schools and organizations
- Developing marketing materials
- Communicating with potential partners (email and in-person presentations)
- Contributing to partnership pipeline to drive subscriptions

Requirements

- Effective communication skills
- Strong attention to detail
- Comfortable giving presentations
- Ability to work independently and within a team setting
- Africa experience strongly preferred
- Knowledge of or experience education and female empowerment a plus

For Intern: Current undergrad,

For Program Lead: Recent college graduate, current graduate student, or junior professional

These positions are part-time from January through May in Washington, DC and remotely. The intern and lead positions are unpaid, however there are opportunities for professional development. These include:

- Professional development/ Master classes in topics such as media, startups, and development
- Access to the DC entrepreneurial community

Applications will be reviewed on a rolling basis until December 29th.

To apply, please submit a cover letter and resume to info@memunatumagzine.com . Let us know if you have any questions.