Read the passage and answer the following questions.

Passage:

Time management is often viewed as a personal skill, but it is strongly influenced by organizational practices. When goals are unclear or priorities frequently change, individuals may struggle to allocate their time effectively. As a result, effort is often wasted on tasks that contribute little to meaningful outcomes.

Conversely, environments that promote clear expectations and realistic deadlines enable individuals to plan their work more efficiently. Such environments also encourage accountability, as individuals can better evaluate their progress. Effective time management, therefore, is not solely a matter of individual discipline but a shared responsibility shaped by structure and clarity.
