Why is it important to meet your Atlanta wedding DJ in person before hiring them?

From finding a gorgeous dress to choosing the right venue, there are many things you need to do before your big day. And among all these, one of the most important things is booking the best entertainment service. Why? Because it's your reception entertainment that will truly make your party memorable-not just for you but all your guests! Some couples invite bands and solo performers, while some feel more keen on hiring professional DJs to get their party going. But before getting anyone on board, we always recommend couples to meet them in person. Wondering why? Below are the listed reasons that will help you understand why you must interview your Atlanta wedding DJ before hiring them!

- To check their vibe

DJs often sound great when the venue recommends them, or you check the reviews online. They seem like a complete package with excellent services, so it is easier to get carried away. But to make sure they are fantastic, you should meet them in person. Often, they are not what they seem; therefore, it would be better to meet them face-to-face to see their claims' authenticity. So, before you hire a wedding DJ, schedule a meeting in person to see if your energy and vision match.

- To be on the same page

Doing a wedding DJ interview gives them a better idea about who you are as a couple. You can share your songs, expectations, and how you envision the party to get going. Trust us, no one can get to know you well via email or chat. Meeting in person will also allow you to discuss song preferences and create a playlist.

- Ensure entertainment with a smooth transition

Your Atlanta wedding DJ is the face of the wedding. They act as a host and are responsible for entertaining everyone. They are also in charge of making smooth transitions between various parts of the event. Therefore, it is essential to meet them in person since they will have to be at the forefront.

- Peace of Mind

Meeting DJs in person gives you peace of mind, so you know you made the right decision. When you email, you always keep the discussion on edge because there's no way to see if they will be an actual fit unless you meet them in person. If you're looking for a professional to help ignite and rock your party, research and schedule an interview to learn more. Also, don't forget to prepare a list with questions to ask your wedding DJ to ensure nothing's left out.

We understand that we have become increasingly dependent on technology over the last few years. For the same reason, we often prefer communicating with vendors over calls, emails, and chats. But let's face it: assigning the most important day of your life to a stranger you haven't met can be daunting. After planning small details for your wedding, don't let it go to waste by hiring someone who makes your event boring or isn't up to the mark. So, when hiring a DJ, meeting with them is the best practice.
