NOTE: There are NO PHOTOS on this recipe page printout to save (you) toner usage. Plus, many folks don't have color printers; just black and white. So, refer to the website for this recipe if you want to see photos of stuff (i.e., equipment used, ingredients, etc.). Also, you may PRINT this recipe page or DOWNLOAD it to your computer. Up to you! That said, let's hop to it!

RECIPE INTRODUCTION

Here's another favorite party beverage I like to make every now and then, which I call my "world famous" raspberry lava flow Piña Bart-Ladas with blended red grapes and pineapple. Whoa, wait 'til you try this one.

FIRST, who doesn't like a frosty cold beverage on a hot summer day or night or how about any time? That said, this is a great drink to make when you want something very cold, frosty and delish! If you like piña coladas, then you'll love this beverage and more. Especially how I make it.

SECOND, because of the ingredients required, per se, I wouldn't make this at parties as it could be quite expensive to make this drink en masse. So, I'll just be going over the ingredients and supplies needed to make 1-3 pitchers that can easily serve 3-5 people a few drinks each. Sound good?

EQUIPMENT NEEDED

❑ BLENDER → I use my personal Ninja Professional blender, but you can use whatever type blender you have on hand. Hey, go for it!

❑ SMALL GLASSES → These drinks are rich in flavor and thick with satisfaction. Try a small glass of the stuff at first. Want another glass? Pour yourself another glass. Want more? Make another pitcher. At least, that's been my experience.

❑ PARTY CUPS → If you do happen to be making this drink at a party, party cups are also a favorite way of serving to those who wish to try it.

INGREDIENTS

Gauge all suggested ingredients based on the size of your blender and adjust accordingly.

❑ 2-3 cups of ice (gauge based on blender size)

❑ 1 cup of pineapple (never include the center)

❑ 12 red grapes (seedless)

❑ 3-4 cups of piña colada mix

❑ 1/4 cup of raspberry fruit puree drink mix

❑ 3/4 cup rum (any white/silver rum will do) or use water to make virgin (no-alcohol) drinks! You also don't need that much rum either per pitcher. So, feel free to buy a smaller bottle to save some money.

DIRECTIONS

Here's how I make my world famous Raspberry Lava Flow Piña Bart-Ladas with red grapes and pineapple. Get ready, you're about to be transported to a beach side bar on some remote Caribbean island.

STEP #1 → Grab 2-3 cups of ice and place it in your blender.

STEP #2 → Grab 12 red grapes and place them in your blender.

STEP #3 → Slice 1 cup of pineapple and place 'em in your blender.

STEP #4 → Pour 3-4 cups of piña colada mix into your blender.

STEP #5 → Pour 3/4 cup of rum into the blender (or water for virgin).

STEP #6 → Place the lid on top and blend this yummy concoction.

STEP #7 → When it's blended and ready to serve, then ...

STEP #8 → BEFORE pouring the blended mix into a glass, pour 1/4 cup of raspberry puree mix into an 8 oz. glass., which will serve one person (at a time as you pour blended mix into each glass).

STEP #9 → NOW, pour blended mix into glass to swish puree around. Stop pouring as you get to the top, of course.
