Mr. Caryl's Economics Syllabus

Welcome to Economics! In this class you will learn about the many people, institutions, and processes of economics. It is my opinion that this is the most important class of your high school career.

What you can expect this semester
You may expect reading assignments, worksheets, video clips, class discussion, handouts, note taking, current events, article reviews, chapter tests, final semester tests.

In order to make our time together enjoyable and productive, the following standards for student behavior are required:

1. Be on time and prepared for class.
2. Actions and language will be respectful of other class members, myself, and their properties. Swearing, inappropriate comments, or obscene gestures will absolutely NOT be tolerated.
3. Talking will not interfere with student work time, your own, or others. Students will not talk over the instructor or a peer.
4. Raise your hand if you have a comment or question.
5. Electronic devices/phones – need to be stored away and kept away during instructional time.

Consequences

1. Warning
2. Conference with student.
3. Parent Notification.
4. Written referral to administration.

Make up policy

1. No credit will be given to any assignment missed during class during an unexcused absence. This includes tests, quizzes, class participation, and homework.
2. Following an excused absence, all assignments, tests and quizzes must be made up within two days after returning to school.
3. Any student who accrues ten or more absences may see an "INC" as their grade at marking periods until work is made up. Additionally, any student who accrues ten or more absences any in any class may be placed on academic probation with the possibility of losing credit for that class.
4. If you have extenuating circumstances, please schedule a private meeting with the instructor to discuss steps that may be taken.
