Decorative Outdoor Lighting - 6 Tips to Installing it Yourself

You have just spent a tidy sum purchasing some decorative outdoor lighting for your home. Now is the time for the installation to begin. If you feel that you have the ability and want to save money then of course you can install it yourself. But if you are at all concerned about doing this work yourself then of course it is worth employing the services of a professional instead.

It is important to remember that the further a light is located away from a transformer the less light it is going to emit. To ensure that this doesn't happen it is best that you only ever put around 100 watts of light on any one line.

Always make sure that you provide a little more wire when hooking up the lights. So should you need to move them at any point in the future this can be done easily without the need to rewire the whole system.

You should always make sure that you buy a large transformer than you actually need. This means that if you need to in the future you can install additional lighting. For example if you want to install 400 watts of decorative outdoor lighting then make sure you purchase a 600 watt transformer.

It is a good idea to purchase a transformer that comes with a built in photocell along with a timer. You should make sure that you orientate this item in a westerly direction this will ensure that it doesn't cause the light to be turned on too early.

When it comes to lighting for the path you need to first decide whether you want only this area light or some of the area surrounding it. For those who want to light a much larger area around the path then the taller the light pole that will need to be used.

It is important to take into account the changes between the seasons. For example if you are using plows or shovels in your garden to clear snow or leaves then don't install decorative outdoor lighting where it can be easily damaged. Also take into consideration the sorts of plants that you have in your garden. When it comes to plants like sumac, dogwoods and hydrangea bushes these even when bare look great when the light is shining up on to them from below.
