

Experiencing the Siege of Boston

In this activity, we will explore first-hand accounts from people who lived through the Siege of Boston.

After reading your first-hand account, answer the questions below. You can write answers in your own words, or write down any words or phrases from the document that answer the question.

Part 1: Describe the writer's experience of the Siege through the five senses. Your person's account may not describe all five senses: include the ones that you can find!

What do they see?	What do they hear?	What do they touch?	What do they smell?	What do they taste?

Part 2: Answer the following questions:

1. What is the writer afraid of?
2. What is important to the writer?
3. How does the writer feel about British soldiers?
4. What else stands out to you about your person's first-hand account? Was there anything interesting or surprising to you?
