

YEARS of dedication... gone.

I remember thinking to myself, “While the rest of us are stuck, slaving away at our job... who the f*ck has the freedom to consistently go to a random coffee shop at 11:30 am sharp?”.

To give you some context...

A friend of mine used to work at a coffee shop.

9-5... 37 hours a week, £7.50 an hour (ouch).

And, his desire to leverage his time in a ‘wiser and smarter way’ came very apparent to him when this tall, muscular, cleanly shaven, Louis Vuitton-wearing, clearly rich man came into the coffee shop at 11:30 am every Wednesday.

And, after he told me... it pissed me off; I couldn’t handle it.

Listen... let me paint a simple picture for you...

While you are working 8 hours a day, 5 days a week, not only working on your boss’s dreams but also being at a particular place when he says so, doing what he wants whenever he wants it, embodying the definition of a slave (look it up)...

There are people in the world driving whatever car they want, traveling wherever they want, gathering the sexy girls they want.

It’s rather depressing, isn’t it?

And listen, the definition of a slave is for someone to ‘force you’ to work for them. And... that isn’t the case in your situation, right?

Can you leave your job today? Would it be safe to just... quit? If not... you’re working against your own will (you’re being forced to work).

And with me working across the road from that coffee shop, and with the thought of being a ‘slave’ circling in my mind, I waited until my shift ended, I approached the guy, and I asked him how he manages his freedom...

He responded, telling me he traded ‘Forex’.

“Forex? The f*ck?”

I didn’t know what it was, didn’t know what it meant, didn’t know what it did.

However, I took it as an opportunity to learn and started working... daily.

To my amazement, I became captivated with the concept of freedom; so much so that I dedicated eight hours a day, 56 hours a week, and 224 hours a month for three consecutive years to working on Forex.

And... through my diligence and a stroke of good fortune, after reaching my third year, I was able to accumulate approximately $90,000 (yes, 4 zeros).

I learned what separates those who do it best from those who fail, why people fail, and what it ACTUALLY takes to go from 0 - a whole load of money

More importantly, I gained valuable insights into the key habits and strategies of successful Forex traders.

And... with the word of Forex Trading dying down, there's a lack of people who are determined and willing to take the journey.

Not just for Forex's sake, but for your sake too, I want to build a group of people, in a similar situation to me 3 years ago, to dive into Forex...

Or... in other words, learn how to make money independently and not work on another man's dreams for the rest of their life.

There are 5.3 billion active users on the internet today, which, for your information, means there are 5.3 billion people all in ONE PLACE, with access to each other (Never seen before).

Showing that with the opportunity to make money anywhere, there is no better place than the internet (no matter what your relatives who don't understand the internet say).

So, if you want to learn the fundamentals and how you can gain a head-start in Forex trading (no matter your age)...
