

- 1) Who is reading my copy? Women who want to make their house more comfortable, as well as protect their home. Men will appeal more to the logic of protecting their house, as their biological drive is to protect. While women would rather prefer a cooler home and better aesthetic with window tint. Who else is reading this, those that want to tint their car windows because it is hot in Florida. they want to escape the heat that creeps in from the sun. lastly are people who already are interested in getting their windows tinted but want to know a little more about the values and about the business.

They are now interested in escaping the heat from the sun for window tinting, as well as protecting and making their home safer from break-ins with residential window tinting. They are interested in protecting their home but want to know if it's worth the investment.

I want them to click and fill out a quote form or call to get in touch with the business owner to set up an appointment to get their windows tinted and get quoted for how much it would cost.

The steps I need to do get them to do this for residential is to evoke enough emotion for them to disregard how much money it costs, but have the feeling of protecting the ones they love at home, their children, and partners, and get the sense that break-ins are real and happen to anyone.

I believe I could improve more on getting them to see the value so that they can't say no. To create more value for the customer in their eyes. I think the length and explanations are good, but it could perhaps be more concise I don't want to lose the emotion and avoid being like "Your kids can die in a break"

For automotive, I think I hit it on the nail. The only thing is I don't want to make it seem like I'm selling them which I feel like I'm doing. So I can improve on that making the logic build on itself.

For the About Us page, I feel like I could include more about the business but I think I made it well at being concise. Maybe add more of a story somewhere.

Here at Auto Window Tinting Jacksonville we take pride in our work. Our home window tinting option offers more than the run-of-the-mill car tint you are used to. Our tint will noticeably lower the temperature in your house during the long summer days. Getting your windows tinted will in fact save you money.

Protect what you love

- Reduced visibility makes it difficult to see what lies inside your home
- Deterrence showing you may have other security measures
- Shattered glass protection, hold windows together when broken

Reduced Visibility

Reduced visibility makes it hard to see the inside of your home. This acts as a barrier when someone is looking inside your home. When window tint is applied to your windows it will absorb light. This in turn does not provide visibility as the light stops. The darker the tint the less other people can see through.

Prevention

Seeing tinted windows is a deterrence for someone looking to break in. When a burglar sees tint they can assume you have other measures in place to keep them out like cameras or a dog. This will be a barrier when someone considers your house as a target.

Structural Support

In the event a break-in does happen, window tint can hold a window together. This can discourage break-ins as it may take longer to get inside your home or be louder.
