Empowering personal expression through art and fashion.

Jeremiah Rosborough is the creative force behind Rosborough Klothng and Artworks, a brand that seamlessly blends art, culture, and fashion to tell compelling stories that celebrate personal and collective identity. As an accomplished artist and media production specialist, Jeremiah uses his talents to advocate for community empowerment and positive change. His work transcends traditional boundaries, connecting fashion, media, and community service in a way that inspires and uplifts those around him.

Jeremiah's diverse skill set includes media production, where he specializes in creating impactful multimedia content that highlights stories from underrepresented communities. He is also the co-founder of Long Beach: In Your City News (IYCN), a platform dedicated to fostering digital literacy and empowering residents through hands-on media training. This program equips participants with essential skills in communication, public speaking, and digital storytelling, making media accessible to everyone.

As the author of "Girl Dad," Jeremiah shares his journey as a single father raising two daughters, offering insights and inspiration to other parents. His narrative reflects his commitment to family, resilience, and the power of storytelling as a tool for connection and healing.
