

Summer Bubble fun

"Its So hot!!" Yelled a little small cccat. No larger than a house cat in size. He was so new yet so loud for his age. "Can we please go to the water today? I need to cool off!" He was laying in the grass now looking like he was melting away. Tongue was out , teeth gaping. His little fluffy orange fur was not helping today. Today was a very hot summer day. The town of Fall was booming with visitors even with the cracks and broken world they lived in now. With the help of everyone the town somehow stayed strong and continued to flourish.

"Little Chevelle, I have something better for you than just the beach. Please come with me to town and we will go visit the water bubbles." Xeros spoke soft but strong like the adopted father he was to this small little cccat. Xeros was the alpha of his clan, taking in many unwanted and abandoned cccats under is wing. Chevelle jumped up with a huge smile on his face, forcing his pearly white tusks out with pride. Xeros waved Chevelle to come along with him as he started walking down the main street of the Town of Fall.

The walk was not to far. Just a few steps around the side of Cybers shop was a small portal. "This will be your first time using a portal. Make sure you walk through at a normal pace, no jumping or acting crazy. We wouldn't want only half of you to arrive." Xeros chuckled with his sarcasm. Chevelle however didn't think it was funny. "You're joking right?" Chevelle questioned as he stepped forward towards the portal. "Maybe." He smirked as he walked through Infront of him.

"Okie dokie then." The little cccat stepped through the portal. He was instantly transported to a grassy field with huge bubbles and orbs of water floating over him. They had to be miles high and long floating with the wind and breeze. "Have fun getting wet, I will be taking these portal parts to cyber just along the tree line. Make sure to come back to me before to long so we can head back." Xeros smiled as he watched Chevelle the smallest cccat in his clan have the time of his life.

The bubbles where a new thing since the fracturing. They float for the have no where to land anymore. Like floating lakes attracting all forms of Skire to swim and play on hot days. Xeros was happy to see the summer being so vibrant and full of life after all he had been through. They definitely deserved some good summer fun days.