Damon

Damon is an accomplished blacksmith and antique store owner, his store's sign is actually entirely gone aside from the words "Antique Shop" and a small advertisement for the Blacksmith within, along with his slogan "Steel's Our Deal!". Despite his lack of sales in this day and age, Damon still insists on continuing his craft for those who do appreciate a well-crafted item. From ladles to swords and much more, if you give him the items to make something, he'll make it. For a price, of course.

While it'd require someone fit for the job, he'd possibly take on a Blacksmith apprentice if anyone was interested. He's a pretty laid back guy, though extremely serious when it comes to his work. His shifts in attitude can be a bit jarring, but he's another person just trying to make a living, like any other. Perhaps working with him would get him to tell some stories of where he learned to forge things.
