

"ONE MORE TIME: Upcycled Art by 3 Artists" by Gabrielle Javier-Cerulli, Amy Weh, and Gary Niebuhr

Exhibit Statement

The beauty and potential in discarded objects will be explored. There is so much creative energy in these objects. This exhibit will be the first time these three artists are exhibiting together. Their passion and proclivity to use upcycled materials brought them together. We hope you enjoy looking at repurposed materials that have a new life.

Gary Niebuhr's Bio

Gary Warren Niebuhr is a found object, mixed media, collage and assemblage artist. Gary's art has been included in exhibitions throughout Wisconsin and beyond. Gary served forty years as a public librarian and now enjoys his retirement making art, take photographs, gardening and watching old films and current sports.

Amy Weh's Bio

Amy Weh is an accomplished mosaic artist with over 30 years of creative experience. Her journey began with watercolors, but her passion for texture and depth led her to the world of mosaics, initially working with traditional materials like china, stained glass, and smalti. Over the years, Amy's work has evolved to incorporate a unique blend of found objects, metals, and reclaimed materials, allowing her to create intricate, one-of-a-kind pieces that reflect her commitment to sustainability and creativity.

Gabrielle Javier-Cerulli's Bio

Gabrielle Javier-Cerulli is a mixed media artist focusing mostly on upcycled art using found objects. Just her way of trying to keep stuff out of the landfills. Her work focuses on abstract flow and textures. She holds an M.A. in expressive arts therapy and currently is the Program Director at Wheelhouse Studios at UW-Madison.
