Occupation: Barista

A painfully shy barista who frequently gets caught glancing worriedly at anyone they’ve ever had a positive interaction with (although nobody can ascertain why). They seem to have a crush on one of the regulars—a friendly Italian man who runs the restaurant across the street—but claim he’s too far out of their league, and a man like that surely must already have a lover. It’s a shame, really, that they aren’t in a position to notice how much happier he is when he comes in and sees they’re working that day.
