INTRODUCTION

Introduction contains the significances and the background of research elaborated by implementing inverted pyramid method, start from global level, national, and local. This section presents the research problem data. The introduction also mentions the urgency of the research being carried out.

The inclusion of references (studies or related research result) is by adding the name and years of the source in every sentence before full stop mark (.), in accordance with Reference, for example: Strasburger et al., Research, in 2010 adolescents between 8-18 years old spent their time to access social media 7 hours a day in average.¹ For reference please use Vancouver style. When using Vancouver style/format, follow the author-number method of in-text citation. This means that sources are cited in the text using numbers in the order they appear, for example as (1), and with superscript.¹ This applies to both single and multiple authors, and to all reference sources. One complete reference for each source should appear in the reference list at the end of the paper. It is advisable to paraphrase when referencing content from another work.

The number of pages of introduction is 1-1.5 pages written in Times New Roman 12 pt 1.15- spaced. Every paragraph begins with a word protrudes into 5 digits. The final part of introduction must state the novelty and objectives of the research.

MATERIAL AND METHODS

This part explains the type of the research, location and time, population and sample, sampling technique, data collection technique, data analysis, and data presentation. Qualitative studies, such as case study, phenomenology, ethnography, et cetera, must include additional explanation regarding the description of validity checking of the research results.

Sub-title

All section on materials and methods can be written in sub-title and use sentence cases. Research that uses tools and materials must specifically write down the used tools and materials. The ethical statement must be stated, mentioning the ethics number and the granting institution.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Write Sub-title If Needed

The result part describes the characteristics of research subjects, univariate analysis, bivariate analysis, and multivariate analysis (if any). In this part, the author is allowed to present tables and figures in which the writing style must be in accordance with writing guidelines.

The interpretation of research result is written in form of narrative followed by the discussions that collaborates the research results with the corresponding theories. The limitation of research should be mentioned.

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

Conclusion consist of brief summary of the description of the results according to the objectives of the study. Suggestion is arranged based on the findings of the study that has been scrutinized on the discussion. Suggestion may refer to practical actions, development of new theories, and/or further research. The paragraph begins with a word protrudes into 5 digits and must not use bullet or numbering. Conclusion and suggestion are written within 1 paragraph.
