

On Sea Turtle Patrol

After finishing the reading, I learned the importance of ecological conservation. As we can see in this book, the volunteers are trying their best to keep the sea turtles safe. According to the content of the book, without the help from those volunteers, the sea turtles might be in the danger of being misled by the bright lights of condos and hotels near the beach. Also, the sea turtles may probably be squashed by a car. With these dangers that the sea turtles will face, the numbers of those will decrease aggressively. However, these are just small parts of the threats that cause the endangerment of the sea turtles.

Recently, we often see the terrible news that the sea turtles had been found stranded by the beach with plastic bags or straws in their noses. What's more, owing to the well-development of the society, it is common that there are a lot of tall buildings built right beside the beaches. Hence, the sea turtles may be killed by humans accidentally. Furthermore, even the sea turtle lay their eggs successfully, their babies have high chances to die before getting back to the ocean because once out of the nest, hatchlings face many predators including ghost crabs, birds, raccoons, dogs, and fish. Also, the rising global temperatures will result in warmer sand, causing more female than male baby turtles. Consequently, it shows that the ecological conservation of the sea turtles is extremely significant.

The reason that we often see the issues of the sea turtles is because this issue is not only just about these sea turtles' survivals or not, but also a big relationship with the whole ecological chain of the nature. It's essential that everyone should take this problem seriously. Thanks to many charity groups which are organized for protecting the sea turtles, more and more turtles can go back to the ocean successfully. Although it may still need a long time and plenty of efforts to make the environment of beach safer, it is a big progress of this project. All in all, after reading this book, I am wondering that I can join the volunteer group like Callie and Gram, who are the main characters in this book. Despite of the fact that I may not be enthusiastic in the sea turtles as Callie and Gram are. Nevertheless, I still want to try everything I can to protect the sea turtles and give them a bright future because it is not just the responsibilities of those volunteers, it is the responsibilities to every human on the earth. It is the same goal we need to do it together!
