v1.1, 2-Sided By Jimmy Chattin

You are a Gunslinger (GS) with other Partners in your Posse and a Game Marshal (GM) in the near-mythical land of The West. While you are dangerous, a bullet will end you real quick. Act fast and roll with the consequences. Follow the rules until they need to be broken for the sake of everyone’s enjoyment.

You need: 2 6-sided dice (2d6). Pen. Paper or notecards. These rules, a few Partner players, and a GM. Bold italics is a table title.

Be Competent

Be Courageous

Be Cooperative

Be a Good Sport

Make a Gunslinger

You have 6 toughness. You have space for 6 supplies in your pockets and 10 in saddlebags. You wear your hat, clothes, belt, and boots.

You may pick or roll for your GS:

Get your name and your horse. Get your weapon. Get 4 supplies for your pockets and 1 box of bullets or shells (use 1 box per reload) for your weapon. Get 2x your particulars. Get your why. Someone get a why to be shared by all Partners.

Is It Dangerous?

Whether the GS acts or is acted upon, the GS’s player rolls 2d6 when the GM suggests so. You must roll at or above the act’s threat.

If the 2d6 shows doubles, the roll immediately succeeds or fails if above or below the threat, respectively. Other effects happen:

	Acting	Acted Upon
Above	Immediately take an extra action
Below	Complication	2x the effect

After doubles, if the GS is in a superior or otherwise advantageous position, or has a particular that applies to the roll, add 2 to the roll value or succeed the roll automatically.

If in a disadvantageous position, remove 2 from the roll value or fail the roll automatically.

Actions

Gunslingers act first in any order when there is a threat to the Posse. If unsure who acts first, roll d6 - the highest goes first but same rolls take and resolve actions at the same time.

Everything that will take an action declares what action will be taken before any action resolves. A single action may be taken by a character until all characters that can act have. The order of actions then repeats in turns until the threat is passed.

A single action includes, but is not limited to: Prepare a knot or aim, help another in their action (add 1 to that character’s roll), move within a room (~5m) and attack or reload, move between rooms (~10m), get something from saddlebags, bar a door, mount your horse, say your part in a conversation.

You may move farther while on a horse.

Toughness

Everything has toughness. GS have 6. Harm removes from toughness.

At 0 toughness, roll d6 to know how many turns or tens-of-seconds the GS will live. The GS dies when the time is over unless another character helps them up.

At negative toughness, the GS dies. Any other character dies at 0 or fewer toughness.

A GS regains 1 toughness per day by taking a breather action. A meal and a night’s sleep regains d6 toughness.

Game Marshal (GM)

You describe in detail fictional settings, the consequences of actions taken by GSs, what non-GS characters do and how, and moderate player actions and complications (e.g. reload required, stuck knife, bucked off, loud creak, etc.). You decide if a player gets what they want without a roll, a roll, or not at all because what is wanted is impossible as described. You cooperate with players to allow rolling dice for possible wants. You determine if a GS particular seems appropriate to help or hurt what the player wants to happen. You mediate disputes fairly but your decision is final.

You never roll dice unless you want to randomize what happens next.

Roll d66 unless specified, where the first die is group, the second is the entry in that group.
