

The Perfect Luxury Tool Watch for the Race Track: A Review of Rolex Daytona 116509

The history of Rolex with the Daytona Speedway started in 1964 when the Swiss watchmaker became the official sponsor of the renowned race track. And this is what's interesting—though the Cosmograph Daytona did not start off as a driver's timepiece, it is largely attributed to the world of professional driving.

Well, that's because its case is packed with all the features a driver requires to keep perfect time on the track. These include a Tachymeter bezel that can gauge speeds of up to 400 kilometres per hour, as well as reliable chronograph functions and shock-resistant perpetual movement. Annually, the winner of the 24 hours at Daytona is granted with a 6-digit Cosmograph Daytona.

The first-ever Daytona was introduced back in 1965. This was also the first time that the moniker 'Daytona' was seen on the dial of the Rolex Cosmograph. Since then, the luxury watch has gone through a striking evolution, which includes the upgrade from a printed Tachymeter bezel to an engraved variation. It also underwent a major transition from a non-Rolex movement such as the Zenith El Primero to in-house Rolex movements. Furthermore, it started to employ top-calibre materials such as precious metals, 904L stainless steel, and sapphire crystal.

If you want to buy a Rolex Daytona in London, then the 116509 is one of your best picks. We'll reveal everything you need to know about this iconic timepiece. So, read on.

Presenting the Rolex Daytona 116509

Every new or used Rolex Daytona 116509 has a special place in our heart here at Time 4 Diamonds. This men's luxury sports watch is meticulously crafted from 18ct white gold from the bezel to the Oysterlock clasp. It also comes with a three-link bracelet and a 40mm Oyster case. And to further give you a treat, this watch is also available in blue and white gold dial variation.

The Ultimate Driver's Watch

As mentioned earlier, Rolex initially outsourced the Daytona movement to Zenith prior to their in-house production of the calibre 4130 movement. Employing a state-of-the-art chronograph complication and a Paramagnetic blue Parachrom hairspring, this movement was developed by the Swiss brand to bear the brunt of professional racecar driving. Thus, it is the perfect tool watch for the race track.

It's Time to Invest in a Rolex Daytona 116509 for Sale

Rolex watches for sale boast superior quality and resale value. Hence, a white gold Rolex Daytona such as the 116509 is worthy of being included in your collection. Apart from the serious value it offers, it also exudes an elegant, sporty design with a Tachymeter bezel and stopwatch functions. Simply put, it offers you the best of both worlds.

Here at Time 4 Diamonds, we offer an exquisite inventory of new or pre-owned Rolex Daytona 116509. Each item is certified authentic by our in-house team to ensure you are purchasing a valuable masterpiece. And if you want a timepiece that is unique and portrays your character, you can also explore our custom luxury watches. What's more, we also offer a suite of professional services, including PVD and DLC treatment, gem setting, repair, and more.

Searching for a Rolex? Need more information about our bespoke services? Explore here.