How inclusive is the picoh Robot for all learners?

The thing I really enjoyed about the Picoh was it did have a language function on it, and that was really great. We had one child and the class who came to the country just a couple months ago during this recent lockdown with absolutely no English, but he is someone who has been able to access this because of its Spanish setting that it has on there.

And so he can still see what is going on with this Picoh. He understands exactly and can relate it still to this idea of some kind of hardware that would use voice recognition.

And you get a response out of a clear input and a clear output.
