ABSTRACT: An abstract is a short summary of your presentation or research. It tells the conference organizers—and potential attendees—what your talk, poster, or paper will be about. They usually include the topic or problem you're addressing; why it matters; what you've found or will present; and what you hope people will learn from it. Think of it like the "blurb" on the back of a book: it gives just enough information to explain what it's about and make people want to learn more.

Here are a few guidelines to help prepare your abstract:

- The abstract text should be less than 350 words.
- Submitted in English.
- The title should be less than 140 characters
- Select 3 – 6 keywords that are important terms that capture the main topics and ideas of your presentation or paper.

KEYWORDS: Select 3-6 keywords.
