

What happens if I can't make a live session?

Much of the learning takes place in the sessions themselves via interactive exercises and breakout-group discussions. But if you can't make a live session, that's a-ok — we'll record each session so that you can catch up before the next one.

I work full time - what is the time commitment?

We get it, you're busy. The course will take place over four, four-hour sessions over the course of two weekends.

There will be 'homework' that you will complete in between each session. The homework follows a choose-your-own-adventure model — if you only have 30 minutes, I've selected an assignment to help you get the most out of the course. But if you have a li'l more time and want to dive deeper, we got you covered too!

What is the refund policy?

Plans change. We understand that — but I also want to tailor this course to the participants as much as I can. To minimize disruption, you can receive a 50% refund up to three weeks before the course starts. After that, there will be no refunds offered.

I have a different question - who can I email?

That's great - I'm excited you're curious about the course and I love a good question. Feel free to email Charley at charley.c.johnson@gmail.com
