Summary

In Paul Fleischman's book, Seedfolks, the story “Kim” is about a nine year old girl who is sad that she never got to know or meet her father. Her father had died before she was born. He used to be a farmer. As a way to connect to her father, Kim decides to plant three lima beans in the vacant lot across the street. By planting the beans, Kim feels better because she believes that as the beans grow, then her connection with her father will grow too.
