

Reading and Writing Go Hand-In-Hand

There are tons of exciting activities to try out as both a reader and writer.

Keep a notebook handy for when you get a great idea to jot down.

Here are a few choices to get you started:

After reading a great book, you probably would like to share your opinion about why you enjoyed it. Click HERE to publish your own book review.	Sometimes we are just in the mood to listen to a story. If you are having one of those days, click HERE to enjoy popular stories read by famous storytellers.	Are you up for a challenge? Click HERE to learn more about how to join the Scholastic Summer Read-a-Palooza! Start at Home Base and have fun!
Love Poetry? Want to learn how to create your own poem? Click HERE to learn from a pro. Jack Prelutsky will share his amazing poetry writing talents and ideas with you.	Are you ready to share all those amazing ideas that are in your mind? Take some time to explore your imagination and write a story, recipe or how-to book. Click HERE to get those ideas rolling!	When reading a fictional story, sometimes we can feel like the characters are real to us? Click HERE to share your ideas about your favorites on this character scrapbook.
Are you curious to learn more about the past or do you just want to learn about people who are famous? Click HERE to read some fascinating biographies.	Nonfiction! Oh, there is SO much to learn about. Click HERE to get some real facts about animals. Choose your favorites, read the articles and enjoy the videos!	Authors are patient people. Great writing takes time. Click HERE to learn about the steps of our third-grade writing process.