

Introduction to the Guide

Hello, and welcome to the Wayhaven Guide, Book One Edition! This is a fan-assembled and unofficial guide that tracks stat changes, relationship points, and significant text variation! We put this together in our free time and out of nothing more than a love for the series and a dedication to helping fellow fans, so please forgive any typos you might see or errors in the guide, and don't hesitate to contact us to make us aware of them so we can implement the necessary corrections.

Here are just a few general notes and tips to start with, and some things to keep in mind as you make your way through the guide:

1. This was designed and written with people who've already played the series in mind. It uses shorthand for the love interests names that those following Mishka's blog are familiar with [A for Ava/Adam, N for Nat/Nate, M for Morgan/Mason, and F for Farah/Felix], and there are spoilers throughout.
2. We haven't included any sort of text leading up to the choices at this time, as the guide is already so long without it. Instead, the choices are labelled numerically. Therefore, this will be easiest to use as you're reading along so that you can find the corresponding choices more easily, rather than looking for what a specific choice's consequences will be independently. If there's demand for text leading up to the choices in the future, we will consider adding it at a later date.
3. As is the case in the game, some of the stats (those that denote the Detective's Personality and Traits) are paired together, so that an increase in one direction means the opposing stat is lessened. For example, gaining points in Charming means your detective is less Intimidating, and so on. For simplicity's sake, these paired stats are referred to with just one "side" of the scale, all of which are on the left/red side in the game's Stats screen. This means that if you want a Detective that predominantly uses the "Mind" trait, make sure to focus on choices that will yield a -Heart% result, if you want a Detective that Bends The Rules, target -By the Book% options, etc. We hope this has limited potential confusion with regards to the stat percentage changes, rather than made it difficult to understand.
4. Rebecca has two different relationship stats, one of which corresponds to the Detective's past relationship with her, and the other that represents the current relationship. The past relationship stat is referred to in this guide as "Mother" and the new relationship is called "Rebecca". "Mother" will not change regardless of your choices after it's set during your first interaction with her, whereas "Rebecca" can change as much or as little as you want it to, in either direction. At some points, the relationship between these two stats can influence the narration, and that variation is detailed in the guide where it occurs.
5. Similarly, Bobby can have two distinct relationship stats if their "path" is triggered in Chapter 9. The first stat, which everyone will have, is denoted as "Bobby Relationship"; this stat is static and does not change, and it influences the nature of certain interactions with Bobby and how the Detective will react to them. The other, which is only present for players on the Bobby path, is denoted as "Bobby New Relationship" and can increase with different choices made.
6. The game has a few hidden stats that relate to a Detective's ability to accomplish certain choices, but aren't shown visibly in the Stats screen. One such example is the Energy stat, which comes into play during the Detective's final confrontation with Murphy. We've included these hidden stats in the guide to show you which choices will impact them, but you may want to keep track of your own personal +/- record for them, as you won't be able to reference where you're at with those points otherwise.

7. As a general rule for these types of games, the best strategy is always deciding what you want your character to be stat-wise early on, and playing to your character's strengths in its later stages. Unless deliberately pursuing stat check fails in your playthrough, the best way to guarantee you'll pass stat checks is making sure you're very strong in 1 or 2 categories. Any skill can be useful, but diversifying your skills too much can end up hurting you in the long run.
8. The Book 2 Guide is currently under construction! Watch this space for updates within the next few weeks.

Without further ado, welcome to the guide! We truly hope you feel that this guide is useful, and welcome any suggestions you have to make in terms of the administration of it.

If the Detective did shoot, F will laugh hysterically at A being wounded, while N is concerned over the injury. The woman they meet with will be concerned about the wound and ask what happened. A will grip their wounded shoulder when finding out who they’re supposed to protect. The Detective will realize that firing their gun and injuring one of them adds a whole new file of paperwork to complete.

If the Detective did not shoot, F will joke about leaving a great impression on the local law enforcement. The Detective will be thankful that not firing their gun saved them an hour of paperwork.

If the Detective used pepper spray, F will laugh hysterically at A being soaked with the substance and say that they're going to stink of it for a week, while A is irritated and embarrassed. The woman they meet with will ask why A is wet. The Detective will be thankful that not firing their gun saved them an hour of paperwork.

If A is a woman, she will give the Detective her scarf. If A is a man, he will give the Detective his coat.

- ...staring in complete confusion.
  - No effect.

If the extended A Romance scene is not triggered, the chapter will end after the rest of UB catches up with them, and the Detective separates from the group to go home.

If the extended A Romance scene is triggered, A will realize that they pulled the Detective close to them when giving them their coat/scarf, and the Detective's skin will burn like a furnace against A's over-sensitive skin. A is surprised to have noticed signs of attraction the Detective displayed because they usually do their best to ignore them, and they will feel reluctant to release the Detective from the embrace they're in. F will interrupt the moment.

If the Detective pepper sprayed A, F will make a joke about A “peppering” the Detective with affection. If the Detective shot A, F will make a joke about A “shooting the breeze” with the Detective. A will be annoyed at the reminder that they had to throw out their favorite T-shirt.

The Detective will realize the coat/scarf has begun to feel comfortable.

If the extended N Romance scene is not triggered, the chapter will end after A catches up with N and the Detective and A tells N that Rebecca wants to meet with them. The Detective decides to call it a night, and leaves wondering whether or not they'll get any sleep out of the night.

If the extended N Romance scene is triggered, N will remember how powerful attraction can be. Even after the Detective takes a step back from N, they can still feel heat pulsing through them. After A interrupts and they part ways with the Detective, the Detective will overhear A asking N what they think they're doing, to which N will respond "stop being such a stick in the mud." As the Detective leaves, they will see N smiling at them before A pulls them away.

PATROL WITH M

Choice 6

- "So... we're just supposed to wait? In silence?"
  - No effect.
- It's my first chance to really examine the agent... and I like what I see.
  - M Romance +1
- Without realising, I've moved closer towards [them].
  - M Romance +1
- Continue to wait in silence.
  - No effect.

  - Friendly +6%
- "Oh man, I'm in serious need of painkillers," the detective replies, taking the offered hand.
  - Impulsive +6%
- "I'm fine. No thanks to you," the detective replies, batting away the offered hand.
  - Charming -6%
- "Thanks for the concern," the detective replies tartly, though taking [M]'s offered hand.
  - Sarcastic +6%
- The detective bats away the offered hand and gets up by [themselves].
  - No effect.

Choice 9

- ...the detective raises a brow and says, "Thanks, but you can let go now."
  - No effect.
- ... the detective laughs and says, "Thanks for saving me from that embarrassment."
  - No effect.
- [If the Detective is female or non-binary]...the detective blushes, [their] pulse fluttering.

  - M Romance +1
  - Triggers extended M Romance scene
- ...the detective pushes away, their senses obviously fully regained.
  - No effect.

If the extended M Romance scene is not triggered, the Detective will wonder when the rest of the unit will finally show up before F finds them. F will tell M that Rebecca wants to see them, and the Detective will decide to go home, excited at the prospect of sleep.

If the extended M Romance scene is triggered, M will notice heat radiating off of the Detective's skin, and toss all thought of Rebecca or repercussions out the window. M will pull the Detective closer, and enjoy the reactions it elicits from the Detective. This is the only part of humans M enjoys. F will then interrupt them, and say that they're glad they were the ones to find M and the Detective. M will push the Detective away. As M and F leave, the Detective will overhear F tease M about getting to know the Detective, and M will tell F not to read anything into it, as there's only one part of them M would be interested in knowing, and they can barely work up enough enthusiasm for that.

PATROL WITH F

Choice 6

- I hurry to keep up, not wanting to be alone in the shadows.
  - No effect.
- I match [F]'s pace, if only to enjoy the eye candy the agent provides.
  - F Romance +1
- I match [F]'s pace, drawn closer to [their] side than I realise.
  - F Romance +1
- I keep my own pace, letting the agent match my steps.

  - F Friendship +1

If the extended F Romance scene is not triggered, M will come to tell F that Rebecca wants to see them. The Detective parts ways with the agents, wondering if they will get any sleep after the long night.

If the extended F Romance scene is triggered, F will continue flirting with the Detective, wondering why humans tend to be so against following their emotions openly. When M arrives, F will feel a pang of disappointment at the Detective stepping away because of the interruption.

If the Detective went on patrol with A and did not trigger the extended A Romance scene, F will tease A about how weird it must have been for the Detective to be adorned with A’s clothes. If the extended A Romance scene was triggered, F will tease A by saying the Detective nearly melted into their arms while covered in their clothes.

If the Detective went on patrol with N and did not trigger the extended N Romance scene, F will tease N about how weird it must have been for the Detective to see N flailing their bloody hand about. If the extended N Romance scene was triggered, F will tease N about the Detective coming to their rescue and bandaging the wound with such affectionate care.

If the Detective went on patrol with M and did not trigger the extended M Romance scene, it’s revealed that M still hasn’t told anyone about the effect their pheromones had on the Detective and that they have no plans to divulge that information. If the extended M Romance scene was triggered, F will tease M about them being surprisingly attentive to the Detective.

If the Detective went on patrol with F and did not trigger the extended F Romance scene, F will be proud of themselves that their pheromones worked to cover the Detective’s scent. If the Detective called F, the voicemail will interrupt their musing on how quiet the office is without them around. If the Detective triggered the extended F Romance scene, F will lick their top lip at the sound of the Detective's voice, and smile after the message plays.

If the Detective called N, the voicemail will interrupt their inner turmoil over arguing with their best friend. They pick up the phone as if it might infect them, and it will take them several minutes to figure out how to play the message. If the Detective triggered the extended N Romance scene, N will smile at the sound of the Detective's voice and be tempted to play the message again to hear it once more.

If the Detective called M, the voicemail will interrupt their enjoyment of the silence around the station, and they delete the message after begrudgingly listening to it and rolling their eyes at the Detective's voice. If the Detective triggered the extended M Romance scene, M will shift in their chair upon hearing the Detective's voice, and won't delete the message.

If the Detective called A, the voicemail will interrupt them reflecting on their argument with the Detective. They pick up the phone without looking, and nearly crush it with their bare hands upon hearing that the Detective ran off somewhere. If the Detective triggered the extended A Romance scene, A will be disturbed at how relieved they feel to hear the Detective's voice.

If the Detective didn't call anyone, N will re-enter the station and see Tina, who says that she'd thought they left with the Detective.
