Task 2: Discuss the questions below. You do NOT have to write.

1. What do you think about the poem?
2. How does this story serve as a metaphor for situations in life?
3. How does it serve as a metaphor for culture, learning culture, and teaching culture?
4. What is the significance of the fact that the six men were blind?
5. In what ways are we blind to the culture of others or blind to our own culture and biases?
6. What does this make you think about the way that separate cultures make sense of the world?
7. In the first stanza, the author says the blind men were, "to learning much inclined". This means they were intelligent and well educated people. How does that detail add to the message of the poem?
