

The Libertines listing copy | Time Out

Indie rockers, this one's for you. More than twenty years since their debut single 'What a Waster' made it to number 41 on the Australian music charts, The Libertines are heading Down Under for a limited run of high-energy shows. After a six-year break, the iconic British rock band will be returning to Australia for the first time since 2018, bringing their signature chaotic energy and poetically crafted hits to three major Aussie cities.

With hits including 'Don't Look Back Into The Sun', 'Can't Stand Me Now' and 'You're My Waterloo', the British rock band know a thing or two about a good anthem, and their 2025 tour will be packed full with them. Keen? Here's everything you need to know about The Libertines' 2025 Australia tour.

Kicking off with a sold-out show on Saturday, April 12 at Sydney's Enmore Theatre, the band's 2025 tour will also bring them to Melbourne for a sold-out show at The Forum on Tuesday April 15. Missed out on tickets? Queensland-based fans, you're in luck: tickets for The Libertines' final Aussie show of 2025 are still available. The British indie rockers will be taking over Brisbane's Fortitude Music Hall on Thursday, April 17 – with tickets starting at $119.90.

Ready to re-live the noughties? You can snap up your tickets over here.