Character Summary

- ❖ Appearance: Koth is an old klingon, and the deep laugh lines and his long gray hair shows it. Though despite his advanced age, Koth is in remarkable shape as he's stuck to the strict fitness regiment that was taught when he served in the KDF.
- ❖ Personality: Relaxed, cheerful, slightly mentally unstable.
- ❖ Likes: Cooking, opera, reading to children, people
- ❖ Dislikes: Rude asshats

- ❖ Biography: Koth served with honor as a marine in the Klingon Defense Force for most of his youth, being involved in several minor conflicts with the Federation, but by the time he was 30 the marine was ready to move on to greener pastures, taking up the mantle of an Opera Singer with his performance of "Aktuh and Maylota" in 2324 being the performance that kick started his career and elevated him to some fame within the Klingon Opera Sphere with recordings of his performances becoming well sought after. Though this would not last as at the height of his career the now 80 year old former warrior retired, spending several years seemingly doing nothing and just enjoying his retirement with his wife Noggra whom he had married back in 2320. In truth he was spending this time refining his culinary chops before re-emerging as a chef on Deep Space 9. Where his restaurant quickly became well known for attempting to provide almost any cuisine that a person could want, as Koth wouldn't back down from a challenge... with varying success. This lead him to becoming one of the few chefs aboard the station who could provide both excellent Klingon staples but also most Earth native Asian dishes, however nothing that came out of the kitchen could be called "bad" as the old former marine worked hard to provide the best food he could. In 2400 He moved back to Qo'noS to tend to his wife who'd fallen ill, and sadly she passed from a heart attack in the year 2410... since then he's served on various other vessels as a chef, with the Athena being the most recent such vessel.

Misc. Info

- ❖ Roleplay Example:

Koth let out a groan as he rose from his seat, silently cursing his old joints before walking out of the kitchen, smiling warmly as he cleared the board from the day before and set about changing the special for the day to Andorian Cabbage Soup with a side of Riskan Cheese Pastries. Humming a few notes of “Aktuh and Maylota” as he then set about cleaning the bar and pressing a few buttons to unlock the doors and change the sign outside to read “Open”.

As people filed in, the old warrior would grin as he welcomed his patrons, moving from table to table to pass out menus and to make small talk here and there. Little in life brought him as much joy as being able to cook for others and seeing their smiling faces as they ate his food.
