

The Tales of Rainbow Bridge, Gone from Earth but Not our hearts

By Rachel Meadows

One sunny afternoon Scout was feeling under the weather, So she lay on the back lawn to see if that would make her feel better laying in the warm sun. Later that day she went to Mrs.R saying I think it's time for us to make a visit to the vet I don't feel very well and not sure if I'll make it through the night so off they went Mrs. R, her daughter and Scout. As they pulled into the vet Mrs.R called to say that they were in the parking lot ready to wait for the staff to come and get Scout so they all waited in the car until it was their turn for Scout to go get checked out by the vet but she couldn't stand up so the vet tech had to carry her inside. Later on while Mrs. R and her daughter waited in the car for a call from the vet. Mrs. R just got off the phone with the vet and told her daughter things aren't looking good for Scout, What do you mean said her daughter is this the end for Scout? So they both started crying thinking this is the end, so they went inside the vet to see Scout and chatted with the Doctors. I have some very sad news the vet said, after that seizure Scout had I believe it's from a brain tumour or some other type of cancer said Dr. C but it's not for sure unless we do autopsy on her. It's too late to treat her anymore so it's in Scout's best interest to put her to sleep so she doesn't suffer any longer. I'll let you and your daughter take some time with Scout to say your final good byes before I come in with the injection of medicine so she can peacefully head over the rainbow bridge, just press the light button when your ready for me to come back said Dr.C. Mrs.R and her daughter had a great but heartbreaking last long visit with Scout telling her what a great dog she was, mom to so many wonderful puppies and a amazing therapy dog at the cancer clinic. Oh sweet Scouty both Mrs.R and her daughter said thanks for being in our lives for fifteen years we gave you the best life you possibly could have had. So as they both said goodbye kissing and stroking Scout Mrs.R pushed the light button for Dr. C to come into the room, are you both ready she said? Yes we are, "sobbing away" You can be here right until the end with Scout knowing that your with her until she's no longer here on earth but now running free from all the pain over the rainbow bridge but for ever in your hears said Dr.C.

Until we meet again Dear Scout!
