PASSGE I

(Questions Nos.95 to 104)

As my train was not due to leave for another hour,I had plenty of time to spare.After buying some magazines to read on the journey,I made my way to tire luggage office to collect the heavy suitcase I had left there three days before.There were only a few people waiting and I took out my wallet to find the receipt for my case.The receipt did not seem to be where I had left it.I emptied the contents of the wallet,and the railway tickets,money,scraps of paper,and photographs tumbled out of it;but no matter how hard I searched,the receipt was nowhere to be found.

I explained the situation sorrowfully to die assistant.The man looked at me suspiciously as if to say he had heard this type of story many times and asked me to describe the case.I told him that it was an old,brown looking object no different from the many suitcases I could see on the shelves.The assistant then gave me form and told me to make a list of the contents of the case.If they were correct,he said,I could take the case away.I tried to remember all the articles I had hurriedly packed and wrote them down.

After I had done this,I went to look among the shelves.There were hundreds of cases there and for one dreadful moment,it occurred to me that if someone had picked the receipt up,he could easily have claimed the case already.Fortunately this had not happened,for after a time,I found the case lying on its side high up in the corner.After examining the articles inside,the assistant gave me the case.I took out my wallet to pay him.I pulled out a ten shilling note and out slipped my 'lost'receipt with it! I could not help blushing.The assistant nodded his head knowingly,as if to say that he had often seen this happen too!!

PASSAGE II

(Question Nos.105 to 109)

We all know that Eskimos have 50 different words for 'snow'.Or is it 500?Anyway ,an awful lot.It is one of those interesting little facts that says something about the amazing ingenuity of humans.Whereas we see snow,the Eskimos perceive an endlessly varying realm of white textures and possibilities.Except that is not true.Talk to the average Eskimo and you will find he has about the same number of words for snow as we do.I discovered this when I took a sledge-dog team through the Russian Arctic and asked the locals.And it gets worse:the Eskimo-Inuit do not live in igloos.They do not even rub their noses together!'Hearing this I began wondering what other myths surround the world's far flung places

Shelters made out of snow are indeed constructed and fashioned from snowy bricks,just as we like to imagine.Except the Eskimo-Inuit rarely lived in them for long periods and disappointingly ,the elders that I met had never heard of them.In truth,these are coastal peoples who traditionally foraged for driftwood,whalebones,stones and turf to construct their camps,saving snow houses for hunting excursions or migrations

Chameleons also attract numerous myths.While many of them change colour,this is often less to do with camouflage and more to do with their mood and temperature.A chameleon might,if too cold,turn a darker shade to absorb more heat.Or it might turn,a lighter colour to reflect the sun and so cool down.Moreover,chameleons often change colour as a signaling device some such as the panther chameleon,transform into a vivid orange to scare off predators,while others flash bright colours to attract a mate is able to display,the more dominant.Thus the act of standing out can be more important than that of blending in

PASSAGE III

(Question Nos.110 to 114)

At low tide he walked over the sands to the headland and round the corner to the little bay facing the open sea.It was inaccessible by boat,because seams of rock jutted out and currents swirled round them treacherously.But you could walk there if you chose one of the lowest ebb tides that receded a very long way.You could not linger on the expedition,for once the tide was on the turn,it came in rapidly.For this reason very few people cared to explore the little bay fresh and unlitteed,as it was completely covered by the sea at high tide.The cave looked mysteriously dark,cool and inviting,and he penetrated to the farthest corner where he discovered a wide crack,rather like a chimney.He peered up and thought he could see a patch of daylight.

110.According to the writer,the bay could not be reached by boat because:

The Wright brothers did not have to look far for ideas when building their airplane,they studied birds.The act of copying from nature to address a design problem is not new,but over the last decade the practice has moved from obscure scientific journals to the mainstream.The term 'biomimicry',popularized by American natural sciences writer Janine Benyus in the late 1990s,refers to innovation that take their inspiration from flora and fauna.Biomimicry

Advocates argue that with 3.8 billion years of research and development,'evolution has already solved many of the challenges humans now encounter.Although we often see nature as something we mine for resources,biomimicry views nature as a mentor.From all around the globe,there are countless instances where natural sources have serve as inspiration for inventions that promise to transform every sector of society .One such instance occurred in 1941 when Swiss engineer,George de Mestral was out hunting with his dog one day when he noticed sticky burrs,with their hundreds tiny hooks,had attached themselves to his pants and his dog's fur.These were his inspiration for Velcro.
