Warning. Dating game information that changes your perspective on the people around you.

Ever wondering how some people get dates all the time?

Seems to know what to say, when to say it and who to say it to.

I've been there.

Hanging with that friend that seems to have a new girl at home every week.

Almost every day.

Telling you he's conquests and how easy is this and that.

And while he just jokes about it. You can't help but to feel like you don't understand people.

You feel like a loser, a weirdo.

Losing every opportunity to meet that cute girl.

I could have never imagined how wrong I was.

Turns out I did understand people.

I just was just not paying attention to the way people around me were communicating with me.

It's been a few years since and now I'm more worried about if I would ever find the one in this thigh schedule.

But knowing new babes everyday definitely feels amazing and emboldening.

Thank God I found this.
