

Tape: Darel Carey

Darel's illusions can challenge your perceptions of space with the use of line and tape. His work is fun and evokes a reaction as you consider reality and perceptions. Installation projects like his are a great catalyst to an online learning assignment as students have access to different spaces in their homes that could offer more opportunities than a traditional classroom. While Darel often works with vinyl and gaffers tape, students could also use yarn, ribbon, duct or painters tape, or anything else that can create a line. His website features videos of his process, and it suddenly seems less daunting when you see him start with one single line.
