

Matthew Defranco

3/12/23

Copywriting Challenge: Personal Dreamstate

Secure and Serene

It has been over 15 years since I chose at the age of 20 to begin my fortune. To gain a life where freedom and security are applicable to the highest degree.

I wake up on my bed, yawning with my wife still asleep next to me. She has been my wife for almost 5 years and she is both gorgeous and traditional. There is no question who any of my 10 children's parents are. There is no question, she is mine and my fortune is to be shared with all members of my family.

It is nearly 5am, I have a long day ahead. I have my daily morning routine, shower, teeth care, and blessing my fortune. I walk through my mansion in the hills. The construction is sound and the decor was crafted by the best that money can buy. I have chosen to live in the northern midwest sector of the US. I love the outdoors and the scenery on my property. I am worth over $50 million dollars so choosing the perfect location to finally settle down was not hard in the least. The way the music of nature produced by my 200+ acre poverty and the sight of the door to my state of the arc bunker held strong gave me a sense of pure calmness so soothing, it almost felt as though I were in a dream. To be so secure in knowing not even the end of the world could reach you.

I look out at my lush morning dew soaked grass and trees and that is when I see my laptop sitting on my desk. It is on and is showing a google docs that shows the first ever mission I did while working in Hustlers University and I think “Thank you so much for the opportunity to be free.”