

Canadian Fashion Symposium 2020

Digital Working Groups

Teaching and Learning Resources

INSTRUCTIONS: Each group can work together collecting and co-designing reading lists, assignments, and other teaching and learning resources for a potential course syllabus or tool kit on various topics that our members can access to help them develop new courses or augmenting already existing courses. The group moderators will organize the materials into a separate Google Docs and Folders, which can be collected and posted on the Canadian Fashion Scholars Website as an open-sourced resource for all members to use (to be launched on our original Symposium date, Sat. Sept. 19, 2020).

Suggestions for things to include: bibliographies, additional suggested reading list, assignment templates, discussion questions, possible essay topics, possible case studies, links, podcasts, videos, filmography, course outline

Message Board:

Dear Group Leaders,

If you haven't set up a folder yet, please consult the other folders for ideas, formats, and templates - I have reformatted the breakdown of the docs to reflect the template proposed by Jaleesa (with separate documents for links, podcasts, videos, and an annotated bibliography list for books and articles), please kindly copy and paste the tables into a new document in your group folder. That way, it is easier to navigate and find things, and the format is the same in all folders.

Also, periodically please keep checking the sign-up lists in case there will be more contributors and provide them with editing access!

Thank you kindly,
Kat
