			Let us study the parts of a dictionary. The diagram illustrates the components of a dictionary entry. At the top, 'guide words' are shown as 'gate-keeper' and 'gate-keeper/gaug'. Below them, 'entry words' are listed: 'gate-keeper' (n), 'gate-post' (n), 'gate-way' (n), and 'gather' (v). Each entry word is followed by its pronunciation and a brief definition. For example, 'gate-keeper' is pronounced /ˈɡeɪtˌkiːpər/ and is defined as 'a person who tends or guards a gate'. Below the entry words, 'pronunciation' is shown for 'gate-way' as /ˈɡeɪtˌweɪ/. To the right of the pronunciation, 'Parts of speech' are listed: 'n' for noun and 'v' for verb. Finally, the 'definition' is provided for 'gate-way' as 'an opening for a gate' and 'a means of entrance or exit'. The definition is divided into two parts: '1' and '2'. A dictionary has the following parts: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. guide words 2. entry words 3. pronunciation 4. parts of speech 5. definition Guide words are found at the top of each page in a dictionary. These words help find words easily because it tells you the first and last entry words on a page. Guide words can be placed together like in the example above. It can also be placed on the left and right. Guide word on the left is the first entry word in a page while guide word on the right is the last entry word on a page. Entry words are words in a dictionary arranged in alphabetical order. These are written in bold. Each entry word has the following information: Pronunciation - This is separated into syllables and tells you how to pronounce the entry word; Parts of Speech - This abbreviation tells you what part of speech the defined word is; and Definition - This explains the meaning of the entry word. If there is more than one meaning, the definition is divided by numbers. Also, an example sentence is often used to make the meaning clearer.
